

This superb show has unfortunately never been released. The source is supposedly an FM simulcast, but I don't believe it as the sound quality is a bit better than FM. This is from one of the many early bootleg vinyl pressings that were put out at the time, but is not from the Zerocks Records release that is the most common. The sound quality on that release was not as good as the Bush Records vinyl, so the Bush Records vinyl was used instead. A lot of restoration work went into this project, check out the lineage below.

The track listing on all releases is wrong, this is the correct setlist.

The outro at the end of So Strange was taken from the Zerocks Records release, it doesn't appear on the Bush version.

The Furry who sings Furry's Blues is the same Furry who Joni Mitchell wrote a song about (Furry Sings The Blues). As the story goes, the old man gave his permission at first, then sued her when the song became more popular.
